Quality of the attachment relationship

“Invisible Attachment trauma”

The form of traumatization (not about an obvious event)

Child's experience of threat

Totally dependable on his caregiver include the threat of separation from the caregiver

having little response to the signals of distress.

Importance of the Attachment Relationship

Importance of the Attachment Relationship

- The dynamic interaction between caregiver and child is necessary for:
 - Survival
 - Affect/ stressregulation
 - Development of the internal world
 - Experiencing a wide range of affective themes
 - Organization of self
 - Organization of relationship

Quality of Parenting

The quality of parenting:

THE ABC OF ATTACHMENT (Siegel & Hartzell, 2004)

- Attunement
 - Sensitive responsiveness
 - Mentalization
 - Reflective functioning
 - Containment
 - Shared pleasure/ play
- Balance
 - Mother as external regulator
- Coherence

Suicide in children

Development and Suïcide

- The way individuals develop
- How they come to see themselves as individuals
- May have a greater effect on lifetime suicidality than any other factor.
- A number of theories are important in this area including:
 - Bowlby's work on development of lifetime attachments
 - Freud's work on personality development.

Suicide and attachment

- Bowlby's (1969, 1973, 1980)
 - Theory of attachment is critical to the study of suicide
 - Attachment system → proximity to the caregiver
 - Unavailable caregiver due to
 - a lack of quality of parenting
 - Parent threatening their child with the idea that
 - if the child does not behave they will leave /not love the child any more
 - Parent with Suicide threat/ ideation

Suicide and attachment

- This results in:

Fear of abandonment / disruption of the attachment bond a "genesis of anxiety" in the child.

Fear of abandonment leads to greatly increased suicidality later in life.

Suicide and fear of abandonment

- Newson and Newson (1968) in which no less than 27% of parents interviewed, indicated that they used threats of abandonment to discipline their child.
- The message sent to the child is that he or she is expendable; if the child does not behave, he or she will no longer be tolerated (Sabbath, 1969).

Freud's theory of suicide (1917, 1920)

- kill himself =
- he is at the same time killing an object with whom he has identified himself
- is turning against himself a death-wish which had been directed against someone else
- The relationship between the suicidal person and the object is characterized
 - by enmeshment
 - the suicidal person feels a great deal of ambivalence
 - he or she both loves and hates the person (Leenaars, 1988)

Love and hate

- Two processes are happening → both lead to suicide:
 - the suicidal person seeks to be rid of the attachment figure
 - the suicidal person feels an intense guilt or self-blame over their hatred toward someone they care for very much.

Autonomy and relatedness

- Blatt's Two-Configurations Model and Suicidality
- personality proceeds through a dialectical and continuing interaction between:
 - the issues of identity, autonomy, and achievement on the one hand
 - and interpersonal issues of relatedness, attachment, and intimacy, on the other

A little voice inside my head goes on and on

Case: the child

- This case concerns a 6-year old girl with suicidal ideation
- She feels abandoned, lonely and sad
- She describes a little voice inside her head telling her to commit suicide

Letter of the child

Self- image

Case: The parents

- Traumatic childbirth
 - a prolonged and painful labour
 - The intense feelings of fear, panic and helplessness
 - Situations related to the medical specialists
 - neither supportive nor friendly
 - providing insufficient or no information etc.
- Ghosts in the nursery (both parents)
- Missing features in the quality of parenting (both parents)

Consequences of this Traumatic childbirth

- Mother starts wondering if the child is hers/ She become convinced that the girl is exchanged in the nursery.
- She rejects the child
- She does not attach herself to the child
- Disruption of the attachment relationship
- Threat of abandonment
- Psychological unavailability
- Increased anxiety/ guilt in the mother → enmeshment and over- protection

Consequences of “Ghosts in the nursery”

- On the quality of the attachment relationship
 - ↓
- Disruption in the attachment bond
 - ↓
 - Affectregulation
 - Attachment style (IWM)
 - Body
 - Neurobiology
 - Sense of self
 - Cognition
 - Dissociation

Consequences for the child: Ambivalence

- Rejection from the mother • Mother 's guilt
 - ↓
- The child: No right to exist
 - ↓
- No relatedness • Enmesment with the child
 - ↓
- Loneliness • No autonomy
 - ↓
- Fear of abandonment

Consequences for the child

- Ambivalent attachment style
- Fear of abandonment due to disruption in the attachment bond:
 - Traumatic childbirth
 - Quality of parenting
- Intrapsychic conflict between autonomy and relatedness
 - Foreclosure of the self
 - Identification with the “ nice daughter”
- Suppression of the anger caused by:
 - anxiety for the hate to the caregiver (rejection)
 - Enmeshment without possibility to individuate
- No affectregulation

Treatment

Treatment

- Internal support
- External support
- Working with the parents
- Prevention

Treatment plan: Internal support

- Dis- identification the child from “the voice”
- Building resources
 - Connect with the internal world
 - Give the child a body
 - Affectregulation
 - Anxiety reduction
 - Free the anger
 - Integrating the needs of the child
 - Containment of thoughts
 - Autonomy and relatedness

Dis- identification the child from the inner part

- Imagination exercise: The dream walk
- The little voice is a “ little mouse”
- It is sad and lonely
- The mouse thinks the mother doesn’t love him anymore
- The mouse feels “ forgotten” by the mother
- Then the mouse appears telling: “ you don’t have to live any further”.
- When the child is curious it is punished and then again the little mouse appears

The little mouse = “Invisible attachment trauma”
